A Corporate Snapshot

Harnessing unique and powerful Internet technology, Collective2 revolutionized the world of systematic trading for investors. Before the company launched its website, average investors could not find a universal platform for the type of trading systems previously reserved for Wall Street professionals.

Collective2 created the first Internet portal that allowed the tracking, verification, and auto-trading of multiple systems by multiple system creators. That was back in 2003.

Today, Collective2 remains the leader in the systematic trading industry. We track more systems, have more users, and facilitate more real-life trades than any other company.

Collective2 continues to set standards for power, breadth, and ease-of-use. We welcome software developers, service providers, and brokers to join us and build products and services for the thousands of investors using Collective2's web-based platform.

Technology veteran Matthew Klein created Collective2 out of his life-long interest in trading systems. Previously, Mr. Klein founded Release Software Corporation and TechPlanet, Inc., both venture-funded startups in Silicon Valley.

A privately held company, Collective2 is based in Westchester County, about 30 miles outside New York City. Collective2 collaborates with programmers, companies, and corporate partners in many countries around the world.
